

Editorial

Mladen Radujković

Dear Readers,

In the second half of 2010 we received about fifteen very interesting articles, of which the editorial board chose six to publish in this issue. With respect for our declared editorial policy and position as a mainly regional journal, more than half the articles published are from the regions of central or south-eastern Europe. We are very glad that regional researchers in the field of OTMC have already recognized, in our second year of publishing, the role of our journal and the possibility of using it to present the results of their research. We believe that there is a long tradition in our two regions and significant potential in the construction industry, but also the need for constant learning and innovation. Of the factors that lead to success of construction projects and business in our field, organization, technology and management are important links in the chain. Some researchers in the region believe that precisely in that aspect there is the greatest need for change and improvement which would enable civil engineers to achieve better results.

We are especially pleased to present two articles in this issue selected from the wider international environment on topics that are currently arousing wide interest. We believe that the articles selected will be an incentive for improvement of our practice and the development of new ideas in research. In our next is-ssues we will publish articles from the worldwide international environment, presenting valuable ideas and experience.

We are particularly pleased to announce that our editorial board has in the meantime been reinforced by three new members: Prof. Nicolae Postavaru from Romania, Prof. Mirko Pšunder from Slovenia and Prof. Miroslav Skibniewski from the USA / UAE. In the coming year we expect some more new members, who are also internationally renowned scientists and researchers.

We invite all researchers, practitioners and members of the academic community to contribute through their articles to the development and maintenance of the quality of the OTMC journal. We will be especially glad to publish the results of research, best practices, case studies, ideas for resolving complex problems, suggestions for innovations or the results of experience on significant projects. Our journal is also open to young scientists and PhD students and the knowledge they have gained in the first years of their scientific work.

Yours sincerely

Prof. dr. Mladen Radujković
December 2010